Illinois's Loss--Colorado's Gain.

SIXTIETH MILESTONE.

Reading vs. Observation—Thirty-seventh Anniversary of the Superintendent's Call—Three Changes so far Made—Here and There.

From our Illinois Correspondent.

The people of Jacksonville, were not prepared for anything surprising, when they learned from the columns of last Sunday's Jacksonville Journal, that our superintendent had accepted the call of the superintendency of the Colorado School for the Deaf. The pupils were informed of the fact the previous evening. Comment on his character is unnecessary, as he is well-known, already to the deaf and to the public interested in the education of the deaf. All have been concerned in the position this school, has taken since the new board was chosen for it, and have been looking forward to know the board's policy. But before anything, serious or favorable was taken in regard to the superintendent himself, the telegram reached him offering him the similar office in the Colorado school, and it was accepted. So at last Tuesday's meeting of the board Dr. Gillett tendered the following resignation :

"INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB,
"JACKSONVILLE, ILL., April 11, '93.

"To the Board of Trustees of the Illinois Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb.

"GENTLEMEN : I have been invited by the Board of Trustees of the Colorado Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Blind, and in view of the recent change of policy by the State Government of Illinois with reference to its public institutions, have indicated to them that at the proper time I would enter upon the duties of that office.

"I accordingly respectfully tender to you my resignation as Superintendent of the Illinois Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, to take effect on the 31st of July next. This will afford you ample time to find a suitable, and competent person for my successor.

"In severing my connection with this institution, over which I have presided for thirty-seven years, I beg to assure you of my continued interest in its welfare, and I trust its present advanced position may be maintained, and that its growing efficiency and usefulness may be as great in the future as in the past and present.

"I take pride and pleasure in commending to you the remaining officers and employes of the institution, who are worthy of your confidence and regard.

"Requesting that you kindly enter this communication on the record of your present meeting, I am,

"Respectfully yours.
"PHILIP G. GILLETT, Supt."

The resignation was taken as it was given. Now that the doctor is to go west, it would be idle to state now what he can do for the other school, but it is sufficient to say that he will give it as good a service as he can, even as he has been doing for this one.

At the meeting of the board, just alluded to, Mr. A. L. Hay's resignation as the head gardener was received and accepted, and Mr. Albert Holley was appointed to fill the vacancy. This gentleman has been an active worker in the cause of temperance and religion in the city and vicinity, and will perform his duties here to the satisfaction of all concerned in his appointment, gardening having been his occupation. Mr. Wells, of Elgin, was assigned the place of store-keeper Sanders, the latter having resigned.

Easter Sunday was a joyous and spiritually useful day here. In the morning, Mr Hasenstab conducted the chapel service, including three hymns, "Hallelujah, Christ is Risen!" "Dying, Rising and Reigning," and "Immortal Hope," recited by a number of pupils. The platform was decorated appropriately for the occasion with flower-plants. The executive committee of the Christian Endeavor Union rendered substantial assistance in these previous preparations. In the evening, the Union held an Easter song-service in the Lyceum, using to a large extent the programme prepared by E. E. Hewitt. This programme was entitled, "The Immortal Dawn." A collection of $4.55 was taken for the city hospital building fund.

The sixtieth anniversary of Dr. Gillett's birthday was remembered by the pupils in an affectionate manner. In the chapel, immediately after prayers, he was presented with bunches of roses and Lottie Hall ascended the platform and signed the following verses beautifully to him :

"Why should we count our life by years,
Since years are short and pass away!
Or, why by fortune's smiles and tears,
Since tears are vain and smiles decay!

"O, count by virtues—these shall last
When life's lame-footed race is o'er;
And these, when earthly joys are past,
May cheer us on a brighter shore."

He was so touched that he could simply say "thank you." The text of the morning's talk was "So teach us to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom."—Psalm 90 : 12.

In the evening, the pupils assembled in the dining-hall, as has been the custom. The main event of this occasion, was the presentation of a silver-mounted, horn-handled carving set by the Y. A. L. Society to the doctor, accompanied by the rendition of the following poem by Gussie Rodenberger :

"Time's touched thy head with frosty hand, dear friend,
And threescore years gone tripping past thy way,
But still thine heart would not before that monarch bend,
And keepeth yet the freshness of its youthful day.

"For seven and thirty years thou'st been the friend,
And guide of those bereft of speech that looked to thee,
Nor yet, we pray, shall these thy labors end,
Nor shall thy high devotion unrequited be.

"We cannot bring thee—more's the pity—golden ore,
Or seaborn jewels brought from under Persia's brine,
But deepest love of truest hearts galore,
And ardent prayer to heaven that blessings may be thine."

Then Asa Stutsman spoke to the doctor for the Y. A. L. Society and closed thus : "To show our love for you and our appreciation of your never-ceasing interest in us, we, the members of the Young America Literary Society, bring this (the present) to you. With it go our most hearty good wishes and all the years that may be given you to enjoy."

At its business meeting, held last Friday evening, the Y. A. L. Society elected the following officers for the rest of this school-year, Mr. Molohon, President; John E. Stinchcomb, vice-President; Henry S. Rutherford, Secretary; Charles D. Jones, Treasurer; Mr. Hasenstab, Critic. The society is having fine literary exercises.

The second union literary meeting of the Mutual Improvement and Young America Literary societies was held last Saturday evening. An interesting programme was carreed out. Miss Dunlap gave a well-pointed and instructive essay on "Society and Solitude," explaining the advantages and disadvantages of each. The question, "Do we learn more by reading them by observation?" was warmly debated by Mr. Hainline, assistant, and Miss Leyder, leader, on the affirmative side and Miss Launbranch, assistant, and Mr. Schlegel, leader, on the negative, both bringing forth good and convincing points. The judges awarded the debate to the supporters of reading. Hebert Sterns declaimed "Give me liberty or give me death," and Miss Wray recited the beautiful poem "The Water-Lily." The societies will hold a union farewell meeting on the 13th of next month, at which a valedictory and a reply address will be delivered. So far, the union meetings have proved interesting, entertaining and profitable in various ways, literary and social.

HERE AND THERE.

The examination papers of last year's work have been bound in proper form for the school-exhibit at the World's fair. There are class-photographs in them.

The past two years' report of this institution itself is ready for distribution, but another edition of the same is expected yet, and when it does come out, half-tones of the several photographs taken about will be found in it.

Copious rainfalls have been nearly a daily event of late. The heaviest wind ever known in this neighborhood blew last Tuesday night, and considerable excitement prevailed.

Base-ball has already been resumed here. Four grounds and over have been fitted out in the pasture west of the reservoir. New bats and balls have been added to the athletic association's spring supply. The association is in a flourishing condition.

On the evening of the 31st ultimo Mr. Hasenstab lectured before the M. I. and Y. A. L. societies on "The Making of a Man"

Mr. A. E. Ayers, who had been our treasurer of thirty eight years, was succeeded by Mr. F. G. Farrell last month, per appointment by the board.

Mr. and Mrs. George G. Wait, fomerly connected with the institution as supervisors, are the happy parents of a boy baby. They are located in Lincoln, Neb.

Mr. George and family were surprised by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hathway last Tuesday, and delighted with their visit, though short it be. The young couple expected to visit with the young lady's parents in Taylorsville before returning home to Elgin.

The Fifer Cadets will celebrate the 37th anniversary of Dr. Gillett's acceptance of the superintendency of this school on the 26th inst., with military evolutions. The female classes in the gymnasium will perform various exercises also. It is to be a grand affair.

The Y. A. L. Society held an interesting literary meeting last evening.

Mr. M. P. Ayers is to give a missionary talk on Alaska to the Boys' C. E. Society to-morrow evening.

JACKSONVILLE, ILL., April 15, 1893.

BROOKLYN'S

GALLAUDET HOME FAIR

One of the most interesting and unique events of these early fragrant spring days, which has caused wide and favorable comment among the deaf-mutes generally, was the charitable Fair in aid of the Gallaudet Home for Aged and Infirm Deaf-mutes, which took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Juhring, on the afternoons and evenings of April 4th, 5th and 6th, assisted by a large number of Brooklyn's fairest of the fair, and to whose untiring aid much of its success was due.

The novelty of the affair brought forth a large and appreciative crowd, who vied with each other in competing for the many pretty articles offered for sale, thus contributed in a great measure to make this Fair a memorable success.

The parlors were converted into a bazar, with many booths and tables arranged in picturesque rows decorated with a bewildering array of pretty, bric-a-brac. Household articles, jewelry, fancy embroidery, odd conceits, groceries, etc., presided over with winning grace by the Misses Taylor and Sister Lulu and Edith Holt, Lizzie Smith, Fannie and Berthta Taggard, Gantz, Foland, Mrs. Hegeman, Mrs. Tobin, Mrs. Ryer, Mrs. Taggard, and a bevy of pretty girls whose charming nonchalance and bewitching plausibility convinced many an indifferent patron of the beauty of helping the helpless with something more substantial than mere sentimental sympathy.

Among the many prominent persons who were noticed in attendance were : Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Gallaudet, Rev. and Mrs. Chamberlain, Rev. Mr. Koehler, Rev. and Mrs. Colt, Mr. and Mrs. Haight, Mr. and Mrs. Barnes, W. O. Fitzgerald, Mr and Mrs. Geo. Holt, Helen and Matilda Juhring.

FANWOOD.

A Classical Evening With the I. M. C.

A LITTLE BLIND MECHANIC.

Sunday Services—A Clipping—Visitor List—Etc.

From our Fanwood Correspondent.

The Ida Montgomery Circle of Fanwood, on the evening of April 15th last, at the Harlem Branch Y. M. C. A. Building (5 West 125th Street), in the presence of its beloved founder and Counselor, Miss Ida Montgomery, and a good-sized crowd of the hearing and deaf, imparted its own exalted opinion of a classical evening, in the form of a short drama —"Hiawatha's Wooing;" a repetition of the famed Protean statuesques; a revival of the Court Scene in Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice;" a declamation of "Hamlet's Soliloquy on Death," by Miss Ella F. Taylor, who graduated from the High Class here last June; and a humorous recital by the renowned William G. Jones. Considering that the Circle is composed wholly of young ladies (pupils and graduates of Fanwood), the entertainment was a good argument in favor of Woman Suffrage. The actors and scenes in "Hiawatha's Wooing" were :

The Arrow-Maker....MISS MARY MARTIN.
Minnehaha.....MISS E. TAYLOR.
Hiawatha.....MISS J. BUSS.

SCENE I—Hiawatha's First Visit to the Arrow Maker.

SCENE II—Hiawatha comes to Woo and Win Minnehaha.

The drama's only defect was its shortness. In the Protean Statuesques the actors were as usual Messrs. A. Baxter, M. Glynn and F. Avens. Great was the applause they elicited, and great the credit to the Protean Society. The Court Scene in the "Merchant of Venice" was revived by the following persons :

Duke.....MR. C. VAN TASSELL.
Antonio.....MR. C. MANN.
Bassanio.....MR. W. BOWERS.
Gratiano.....MR. F. AVENS.
Shylock.....MR. W. G. JONES.
Nerissa.....MISS MARY MARTIN.
Portia.....MISS M. BOYD.

All were finely costumed and did well. The performance was duly appreciated by those present, especially the hearing people, who roared with delight at Shylock's behaviour, gazed soulfully at Portia, and took up the rest in a glance. Miss Taylor declaimed beautifully "Hamlet's Soliloquy," and was vigorously applauded. Prof. Jones portrayed in humorous signs the doings of a preacher and his monkey at church, and laughter reigned supreme.

Throughout the exercises the Apollo-like form of Principal Currier was visible on the stage, where he was busily occupied in interpreting to the hearing part of the assemblage the acts of the players.

It was about ten o'clock when the curtain dropped for the last time, and the audience dispersed homeward. Of course they brought away the programme books which were too interesting to leave behind them. Amongst the reading matter was a short essay on "Spring" by Emeritus-Principal Peet.

During a recent visit to the Mansion House we had the pleasure to meet Master Orris Benson, the little blind boy of Fanwood, and his teacher Mr. C. W. Van Tassell. Among other things, the latter said the boy was developing into a master carpenter, and proceeded to disclose the following miniature pieces of furniture: a chair, a bedstead, a table, a sled, a wheelbarrow, a cradle, a house, a stone-boat, a yoke, a wagon, a cart, a sword, a trapeze, a coop, a tool-box, which were made by the boy with out the aid of any one. The correct shape of each piece was a marvel, and served to illustrate how delicate and sure was the boy's sense of touch. He receives full encouragement in his work, for which a part of the time each week-day is reserved.

Prof. Fox conducted the Sunday morning services in the chapel. On Sunday afternoon, Principal Currier completed his clausal definition of the Lord's Prayer with : "And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil, for Thine is the Kingdom, and the power and the glory forever. Amen." Those who fell into temptation, he said, did not use that petition, or if they did, were unaware of the import of the word Amen, and were insincere in their prayers. He illustrated fully the power of prayer, concluding his sermon by advising that a spiritual letter containing the Lord's Prayer and sealed with Amen be daily addressed by all to God, Heaven. The hymns, the "New Jerusalem" and the "Doxology," were sung in signs by a choir of girls.

A recent issue of the Washington Heights Gazette contained the following paragraph, wherein is commended the art work of the pupils here :

The Exhibition of Sketches for the Washington Heights Art Club was held at the studio of Mme. LePrince, 202 Fifth Avenue, on the 6th, 7th and 8th inst. On the first day a number of Washington Heights people were present. The Exhibition excelled that of previous years. The work done by members from the Institution for Deaf and Dumb deserves particular mention.

Rev. Mr. Bryers, of Grahamsville, N. Y., and a friend were visitors here Friday, in company with Mr. Van Tassell.

Mr. Albert Ballin was a Tuesday visitor.

On Thursday evening, the 13th, quite a number of the pupils attended the Gallaudet Home Fair at St. Ann's Church, West 18th Street and 5th Avenue, under the care of supervisors. Among the pretty sales-ladies there was Miss Annie M. Wailder, a member of the High Class here, who had been busy for the last two days raking in shekels in exchange for fancy work.

BY A DRAMATIC ENTERTAINMENT.

(From our Columbus correspondent.)

The entertainment given Saturday evening for the benefit of the Independent Base Ball Club proved entertaining and successful financially We think, however, a little more effort might have been bestowed in the way of selling tickets among outsiders, by so doing the receipts would have been swelled considerably. However, those having the matter in charge, we presume understood their business, so it is not for us to find fault.

The admission fee was 25 cents to all except pupils. The latter were charged 10 cents, and a goodly number of them managed to scrape up a dime wherewith to see the show. Before the performance opened, there being plenty of room, Superintendent Clark and Steward Pollard put their heads together, and, as a result of the conclave, they offered to give a V to those having the play in charge for the admittance of the remaining pupils. This offer was accepted, and with these additions the chapel and gallery were comfortably filled. As will he seen by the programme, the exercises were varied and of a nature to suit both classes, hearing and deaf. The dumb-bell class drill in gymnastics by members of the Y. M. C. A. was creditably performed and excited the admiration of all. We are only sorry there is not a class of this kind organized among the pupils of the Institution. It is a matter that should receive the attention of the authorities. We hope that at no distant day it will be one of the regular fixtures of the school in curriclum of studies.

The grand tumbling and jumping acts were good, considering the fact that the boys were amateurs, and also the small space allowed for running on the stage. As to the singing and musical part of the programme, our ears were closed to them and observation among those likewise afflicted showed no interest in this part of the bill. The hearing people, however, seemed to enjoy it.

The pantomimic feature of the entertainment proved the best of the evening, and the performances of the several players were all good. The firing in several of the acts as a feature common to Wild Western life where Indians and cowboys rule the roost. An idea as to the play can be obtained from the bill below.

Part I. included Class Drill; Grand Tumbling; Jumping; Duet—Selected; Baritone Solo—Selected; Instrumental Duet; Tenor Solo—Selected; Clog Dance, Columbus' Favorite.

ACT. II. Post-Trader. Rifle vs. Whip. Gray Wolf buying supplies. Doubtful qualities. General scrimmage. Flight.

ACT. III. Tent by night. Sambo on guard. Jack O' Lantern Scooped. At the stake. Rescue by Ghost.

ACT. IV. To the fort The scouts to the rescue. Terrible fight. Tableau.

Mr. P. P. Pratt had general charge of the affair. To him and those who took part the baseball club owes its thanks for the time and labor they spent in preparation for the event. The proceeds, amounting to $45.55, will furnish the boys with a pretty good suit apiece.

The Independents played a game Saturday with the Giants, and were crushed into bad shape the score standing 23 to 3 in favor of the latter. As this was the first game of the season, we can overlook the poor playing. A little more practice and better management will put the club in better shape.

Messrs. Elmer Elsey and Frederick Schwartz made a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Sprague, over at Brice's Station last Sunday afternoon. They went over on their bicycles, making the distance, eleven miles in one hour. They think that pretty good time, when the bad condition of the roads are considered, and also the fact they had to wade through several creeks. On the return journey, they made the distance in one hour and ten minutes.

Messrs. W. and Fred. Slonkowski, of Piqua, Ohio, were visitors here during the week. The first named attend school at the Indiana Institution eleven years ago, the latter was a pupil here some years ago.

The statement of your St. Louis correspondent in his last letter, that Mr. Wm. F. Murphy, foreman of the shoeshop at the Arkansas Institution was engaged to Miss Gussie Vassal is erroneous. We have been requested to contradict it, and thus set that gentleman right. There is still a chance for the young ladies to throw their lasso at him.

C. H. Newton, a pupil, was sent home this week for conduct that justified his expulsion.

People upon waking up this morning, and looking out of the window, found the earth in a garb of snow, to the depth of nearly an inch. Certainly not cheering weather when fruit, blossoms, blue jays and robins have been filling the air with their odor and song the past week. And now what will the fruit harvest be? is the question most frequently asked.

Miss Mary C. Bierce came up from Cincinnati yesterday to spend a week or two with friends here.

By the time the Legislature adjourns, which will be about May, the Annual Report of the Institution will make its appearance. The proof sheets came from the printer this week. The Report is unusually late in being printed this year.

Mr. Fred. Schwartz has joined his friend Elsey in the purchase of a bicycle, and the two now may often he seen together on their wheels taking excursions into the country and about town.

A daughter has come to gladden the household of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Corbett, of Bellaire, Ohio.

Mr. J. C. Cleary struck Columbus last evening on his way to Cincinnati. The pupil he has been teaching at Mt. Vernon the past winter has made good progress. He is a farmer, and now that the planting season is about to commence, takes a vacation from his studies.

That German Muddle.

DEAR EDITOR :—Your correspondent, "Montague Tigg," evidently was laboring under a misapprehension when he reported the meeting called to render the decision of the Investigating committee in connection with matters pertaining to the now defunct German Charity and Aid Society.

The committee was selected to perform a duty. It investigated the subject thoroughly and fairly, and rendered a candid report.

If "Tigg" or any one wishes for further information, or desires to verify the fairness of the conclusions of the committee, they can see the record at my house, 153 West 83d St., at any time he desires.

Yours very truly,
A. V. BALLIN.

E. A. HODGSON, Editor.

Specimen copies sent to any address on receipt of five cents.

THERE are a few deaf persons more or less intimately associated with the Church Mission to Deaf-Mutes, who will express no astonishment at the intelligence conveyed by the New York Times, that St. Ann's Church for Deaf-Mutes in West Eighteenth Street will in the near future be razed to make room for the march of trade. To the majority, however, the news will be a surprise.

There can be no question but that a move uptown by the church would be more than welcome. The centre of the deaf population is at present above 58th Street, and the distance from the homes of many deaf-mutes precludes, or at least hinders, a regular attendance upon the services that are regularly conducted at St. Ann's Church on Sundays and other days specially devoted to worship and prayer. The average attendance is in no wise proportionate to the number of communicants. The present situation of the church curtails its usefulness, at least so far as the deaf portion of its members are concerned. It must be remembered, however, that services for a hearing congregation are conducted with greater frequency and to larger numbers than in the case of the deaf, and any obstruction that may tend to prevent the proposed sale of the property will come from these hearing parishioners.

For the sake of the deaf-mutes, we hope the removal will be made, and some uptown site, on the West side, may be selected. The prospects of rapid transit are bright enough to give assurance that almost any site between 59th and 125th streets, west of Eighth Avenue, will be convenient of access to a very large number of the deaf residents of this city.

Should the church remove to a new house, a great many things could be done for the benefit of the adult deaf, apart from the services in the church, but of an importance sufficient to merit consideration. Amid the every-day temptations that assail the daily lives of deaf-mutes, is the one of proper social amusement. Cut off, by reason of their deafness, from the hundred and one avenues of social enjoyment that are open to the hearing, it becomes necessary to devise some means to counteract the evil influences and social allurements that the wide-open saloons hold out, and which are too often made use of in an endeavor to relieve the monotony of an existence into which the joys and the pleasures and the endless variety of diversions produced by sounds can never enter.

QUITE a quanitity of interesting news, because it is embodied in on connected article, cannot be crowded into this issue, although it is in type ready for the maker-up. The issue of next week will contain whatever has been omitted this week.

SOME of our occasional correspondents persist in sending letters without giving the editor the name of the writer. For the hundredth time, we repeat the warning that no anonymous contributions will receive attention. When a letter of news reaches this office, the editor first looks for the name of the writer. If no name is given, no time is wasted on the communication, but the whole is unceremoniously dropped into the waste-basket.

THERE is a prospect that subscribers may receive their JOURNAL one day later than usual next week. This will be caused by a holiday in consequence of the great naval parade in New York Bay and the North River. It will be a great spectacle, as the war ships of many nations will be in line.

WHISPERINGS UNDER THE ROSE.

THE FIRST GUN.

The Gallaudet Society has fired the first gun. At the Executive meeting of the Gallaudet Society on Wednesday, President Frisbee was elected a delegate to the Deaf-Mutes' Congress. The boom of other guns may be heard later on.

"Free Lance" has been requested by several prominent members of the New England Gallaudet Association to lay this proposition before President Crane. New England ought to be well represented—that is the opinion of all—and as the Board can not appoint a delegate on account of the condition of the treasury, the president is respectfully urged to instruct the officers and managers to raise a fund of ten dollars to fifteen dollars from each state by contributions from the members. This is a good idea, and will open the way to having the great association well represented. After the fund reaches seventy-five dollars more or less, the president will be requested to nominate several good men and have postal cards printed to be sent to each State Manager for distribution and forwarded to him by the members with the names of their own choice. A lively canvass is promised, as each State will wish to send one of its favorite sons to represent New England at Dictator Dougherty's Grand Reception.

MR. JACKSON'S LECTURE.

Mr. W. A. Jackson, of Attleboro, chose a good subject for his lecture at the Boston Society last Wednesday, "Good and Bad Luck," which was a fascinating study to persons who have had too little of the one and too much of the other not to feel interested in the unexpected turns of the wheel of fortune, which reduced one man to beggary and elevated another to riches beyond the dream of avarice, as in the case of Marshall, the gold discoverer, and Capt. Sutter in whose land the golden sand was treasured; the hard luck and sudden rise to wealth of Mackay and other Bonanza Kings, or in that of Morosini, originally a poor sailor, but, who in rescuing a pampered son of the President of the Erie Railroad from a mob of boys, laid deep the foundations of his immense fortune and future partnership with Jay Gould.

Other stories of the vicissitudes of fortune were told by the lecturer, and his powers of mimicry, for which he was famous at College, were much appreciated in the story of Bridget, the washerwoman, who in her hovel never failed to scrape the soap suds from her bare arms and curtsey low to the priest when he called on her and hasten to give him a fiver out of her hard-earned savings until one day, an aunt of hers died, leaving her a fortune of $75,000, after which her manner changed to such an extent that, on the priest's visit at her palatial mansion, she received him coldly and gave him just three quarters for sweet charity's sake.

Miss McKay, who has blossomed out into the dignity of a reporter of a deaf-mute paper, wanted to know, reasonably enough, why Morosini, who was so much blessed by Dame Fortune, did not do better by his own daughter, who had married his coachman. After a few moments of reflection, Mr. Jackson sagely observed: "Perversity of human nature."

One young man asked why the favors of Fortune were not equally distributed in the case of his own brother-in-law, who, at the risk of his life, stopped a runaway team of Dr. Latimer, of Harvard College, never getting one cent, while the other man, who saved a rich Englishman from a runaway accident at Nantucket Beach, was rewarded with a legacy of $25,000. The same inquisitive young man said that he also was obliging enough to give up his seat in the Street car to an old gentleman after passing by all the pretty girls with contempt, and demanded the reason why he was not so well remembered in the old gent's will as the other man Mr. Jackson mentioned was? "It was all luck," Mr. Jackson wisely observed, or as Miss McKay said with a sigh which must have had a hidden meaning, "'Tis the unexpected always happens."

NEWS GLEANED FROM MANY SOURCES.

Mr. and Mrs. Goldsmith, of Cambridge, smiled serenely at the tales of the fickle goddess who never comes with both hands full, for, have they not got $80,000 worth of property in their own right? God bless the rich; the poor can beg.

Some one hummed, "To some, Fortune honor gives, without deserving; to some, deserving, without honor; some wit, some wealth; and some wit, without wealth; some, nor wit nor wealth." Which would you rather have? Don't all speak at once.

Colonel Ford, the proprietor of Youth's Companion, told the writer one month ago, that he could not tell how soon Helen Keller's article on her own education would be published in his paper.

The great advance in deaf-mute journalism was a subject of remark by Miss McKay, in view of the improvements in matter and tone from the days she could well remember when only trivial personalities were printed and nobody cared to read the correspondence from any place but their own. Subjects of general interest never were discussed, and reasoning from cause to effect was rarely indulged in, but now all this has been changed, and correspondents are taking an active part in matters of general importance.

Mr. Henry Acheson is circulating a petition for a mass meeting at the Boston Society, to discuss the appointment of a delegate to the World's Congress of the Deaf. It is intended only for the regular attendants of the Society, and will shortly be sent to the Committee. That Mr. Tillinghast will walk off with the palm, is a foregone conclusion, though Messrs. Bigelow, Sawyer and Babbitt are in the field for the honor and may give him some trouble. Mr. Acheson stands ready to give $25 to a lady delegate from the C. R. S.

On Thursday evening, Messrs. Underwood, Babbitt, Skillin, and other young men, attended a select party at the house of Miss Murdoch, in East Boston. This young lady lost her hearing at twelve years of age, and has never attended any deaf-mute school, but feeling an irresistible inclination to mingle with the deaf, she has become a regular attendant of the Boston Society. She is a fine oil painter, without having much difficulty in getting along socially with the hearing people, yet she has a fondness for the society of deaf-mutes. Human nature is too strong for the robes of sand of theorists or hobbyists. Who cares?

Some one started a joke on Mr. Nichols, by darkly hinting that the honest, whole-souled fellow was going to make tracks for Canada with the proceeds of the Lynn Levee. Nobody who knew "Dan" put any stock in the story, and laughed at it, but he, poor fellow, considers it a bad joke, and wants it to be understood that, like Cæsar's wife, he was above suspicion. So you are, Dan. Don't worry. The Committee are satisfied with your management of the funds, and what does anything else matter?

Commandant Selbridge, of the Charlestown Navy Yard, having received orders from Washington to reduce the number of employes, went on his rounds in the Yard, and coming to one man, said, "Hallo, why don't you answer me? What is your name and what are you doing here?" Still receiving no answer, he went up and touched the man on the shoulder, when, lo! that man saluted him after the military fashion, and quickly made the officer understand that he was deaf. "Oh, you are all right," and turning to the Superintendent of the Boat-Building Department, he said, "This man can stay. His deafness is rather a recommendation than otherwise, as he cannot waste time in talking." With a laugh at his own wit, the Commandant retired. Mr. Frisbee was the innocent victim of this joke, but he does not mind it, because it gave him $3 a day. One of the specimens of his skill at the exhibit in the World's Fair is the stern boat of the U. S., Man of War, Illinois. Look out for it, when you get there.

Old timers will remember Mr. and Mrs. Robbins, graduates of Old Hartford, who left two sons in possession of their hearing. One of them has a position as waiter in Wyatt's restaurant on Bedford St., patronized at the noon hour by Messrs. Krause, Bigelow, Acheson, Holmes, Sawyer and others, who find him very useful in serving their orders from the hand. The old folks are dead now, and there are no deaf-mute children in that family. This in the third generation. Did not some rich savant look through a magnifying glass at some cabalistic figures and diagrams on a paper, and say with prophetic vision something about the reappearance of deafness in the third generation? Is n't it high time to call him down? What do you say, Dr. Fay?

Quincy Granite is famous for its solidity and beauty of finish, and there is a small colony of deaf-mutes, all from the bonnie land over the sea, engaged in moulding that stubborn rock into things useful as well as ornamental. They have a chief of the clan among them, Mr. John L. Lyons, who lost his hearing at fourteen years, and studied some time at the Glasgow Institute for the Deaf. He proposes to form a club or society for social and religious purposes.

None of them knows much about the sign-language, having been taught by the oral method, but they believe they can pick up a knowledge of signs as they find that articulation and lip-reading alone are not a satisfactory method of communication. That is the trend of things in this world. Everything seeks its own level and will find it sooner or later, and any one who tries to do King Cannte's absurd act, and say "Back, ye rebellious waves! Back to your own dark, fathomless depths," will find himself driven back. What God wills must go. The resistless march of natural impulses can not be stopped by any human effort. The water damned up will overflow its banks and leap over the barriers. Better give up trying.

A driver of a market delivery wagon is a rare occupation for a deaf-mute, but Mr. Fred. B. Roberts, a gentleman of color, has driven a team for Tucker & Roak, a big firm, for ten years, and never once missed an order or lost a customer through any fault of his own. He takes orders in writing and delivers them in the Back Bay district as well as the best man in the employ of the firm. That his services are much appreciated was shown when, at one time, he struck for higher wages, quit work when his demand was refused, and went back only when he received a letter from the firm accepting his own terms. He is married to one of his own color, but the couple have no pickaninnies, so I can not gratify Prof. Bell's curiosity as to whether deafness is transmitted with the color.

Mr. Valles, of New York, is still working in Lynn. He claims descent from a family that was exiled from the land where "Freedom shricked when Kosciusko fell." He has an uncle, who has seen long service as vice consul of Spain in South America, and being nearly sixty-one years of age will shortly retire to his castle in Spain upon a pension.

Here comes Mr. Moodie with the statement that Mr. Norcross, of Meriden, Conn., went Mr. Butler, of Lynn, one better in the matter of twins, having two pairs of a kind, and there comes Mrs. Barnard, who seems to know the deaf-mutes in every nook and corner of New England, with the story that Mr. Norwood, of Saugus, Mass., and Mr. Bartlett, of Conn., have each been blessed with twin children. Mr. Butler's wife was a deaf-mute, but all his children can hear. Draw your own inference.

Mr. Docharty, educated at Edinburgh, recently paid a visit to the Scotsmen at Quincy, no doubt from a clan feeling. Make a note of this, ye critics.

The Silent World says that the spirit of aggressiveness is one of the signs of the deaf-mute mind. What an absurd idea! Only the other day, the Boston Record remarked that the Massachusetts Episcopalians were the most aggresive body of church workers in these United States. "Aggressive" was the word. Again, two or three days ago, when the question of a successor to Bishop Brooks came up at a meeting of the leading men of the diocese, the debate between the high and low church parties upon the appointment of Dr. Morgan Dix, of New York, waxed quite warm and there was much ill-feeling displayed. Aggressiveness peculiar to deaf-mutes only? Nonsense. Say rather a peculiarity of human nature, and you will hit nearer to the mark.

Bro. Hodgson does not like the gag rule at the Congress. But suppose that some of the members get excited and indulge in a warm debate—as will happen in the best regulated conventions—then, this frailty of human nature may be tacked on to the Deaf-Mute Mind! Perhaps it is as well to shut off steam beforehand.

One would ordinarily suppose that Bro. Hodgson would be the best living exponent of deaf-mute journalism, but Bro. Van Allen has been chosen by the wise discerning committee to read a paper on that subject at the Congress. We will be resigned to listen to a skyscraping essay on "Journalism on Stilts," and bring our spyglass along to observe that speck on the distant horizon.

Mr. Orcutt had better give us a handle to his name as a reporter instead of representing himself by an unknown quantity as he does. I suggest "Xerxes" as a good one. No, he won't read his paper on the "Deaf-Mute Mind" at the Congress. Our Scottish Watch Dog will snap him up quick. That is not going to be a "Congress of Washerwomen Washing their Dirty Linen in Public." There are enough deaf-mutes left with some self-respect among us.

CHICAGO.

"Boheme's" Guide to Chicago.

AMATEUR THEATRICALS AT THE CLUB.

Dr. Gillett's Resignation Causes Sorrow.

From our Chicago Correspondent.

The nomenclature of Chicago streets will undoubtedly prove a perplexing subject to the incoming hosts of the deaf, and I am afraid that unless they keep their wits about them, some annoying mistakes will happen to them. To do what I can toward simplifying the matters, I shall give a short dissertation on the streets, avenues, boulevards, places and courts of this city. When the stranger desires to go to any number over 1200, he should remember that it is on a street running north and south, south side, where east and west streets are known by numbers commencing with Twelfth and ending with—Lord knows what number, but let me say Hundredth Street. To make the situation complicated, Washington Street emerges into Washington Avenue, and into Washington Boulevard on its stretch toward the west, while Washington Place is a short street running between Clark Street and Dearborn Avenue on the north side. Indiana and Michigan Streets run east and west on the north side, while Indiana and Michigan Avenues run north and south to the southernmost limits of the city. All the street cars have no distinctive color for a distinctive line, as in other cities I have lived in, nor do they carry distinctive lights at night, but each car has a board at both ends resting at the top of their roofs signifying their destination, and the visitor should guide himself accordingly. Fifth and Wabash Avenues on the south side emerge into Wells Street and Rush Street respectively on the north side, while La Salle and Dearborn Streets are known as La Salle and Dearborn Avenues on the north side. The city is divided into three districts by the river, which flows something in the shape of a Y, and what is north and east of the river is called North Chicago; west of the branches of the river, West Side and South Side. As all the cable and horse cars turn in the territory comprised between Van Buren Street, Fifth Avenue, Wabash Avenue and Lake Street, no trouble will be experienced in getting on the right cars, providing that the visitor keeps cool and looks at the sign-boards, or asks the nearest special policeman, of which there is one (and sometimes two) at the intersection of all down-town streets. In taking the cable for the World's Fair, care should be exercised that one gets into a blue-colored train with the legend "Jackson Park" at the front of the grip car, not the 71st Street Legend nor Kensington, which run on the same walk up to, I think, Thirty-Ninth Street. The Pas-a-Pas Club will be the rendezvous for the visiting deaf during that memorable week, and it is convenient to all the car lines south, north and west.

The members of the Pas-a-Pas Club will assemble in force at Lincoln Park, Sunday morning, to be photographed in a group for a souvenir edition to be published under the auspices of the club. It is hoped that every one of them will find it convenient and possible to attend.

AMATEUR THEATRICAL.

The younger element of the Pas-a-Pas Club gave a most creditable amateur theatrical at the Club Hall, Saturday night, for the benefit of the fund for the entertainment of the World's Fair visitors. The bill was begun with "Life in the Wild West," description of the life of pioneers, their scrimmages with the bloodthirsty Indians, and the trials and tribulations of the pioneer Chinaman. The play was well performed, and all the performers bore out their respective parts in a manner that elicited great applause and several encores. Matt Schuttler's role as "Wang Wung," the Chinese washee-manee, was the feature of the evening, and produced side-bursting laughter by his natural mimicry of the heathen's looks and actions. Benny Frank, as daughter of the hunter was so natural that those not in the secret thought they were witnessing a bona fide girl.

Jack Bergler's make up as Indian chief was true to life, and his acting so natural that many were deceived into the belief that a goodnatured Apache had taken the part. The others did well, though their parts were by no means difficult of execution. The program follows:

HUNTER	C. C. CODMAN
SON OF HUNTER	HARRY BRIMBLE
DAUGHTER OF HUNTER	BENNY FRANK
INDIAN CHIEF	J. N. BERGLER
INDIANS	GEORGE MERRILL, FRED KAUFMANN, JACOB MACK
WANG WUNG	MATT SCHUTTLER

The performance wound up with a shadow pantomime, in which a half dozen or more parts were more or less creditably rendered. The entertainment netted the committee quite a snug sum of money, and was so well received that the Catholic Society made tenders for a duplicate of it in their rooms on the West Side on terms favorable to the Entertainment Committee.

The news that Dr. Gillett had sent in his resignation, and that it was accepted and that he had assumed the superintendency of the Colorado Institution for the Deaf and the Blind, was received with sorrow in Chicago. I think that if the true facts could be uncovered, it might be shown that the friends of the oral system may be found at the bottom of the displacement of one of the foremost champions of the sign-language. I may be mistaken, but it seems like that. Politics do not generally cut up this way in Illinois, and Dr. Gillett's thirty-seven years' successful career would most probably have been a bar against a removal. Now he is gone, will the Methodist Church services be continued? This church is the only one that gives a regular weekly service, teachers of the Jacksonville School officiating in turn, their expenses being largely paid from the missionary fund. Now the master spirit is gone, upon whom will the mantle descend. Probably on Philip J. Hasenstab. I hope so.

The interest in the lecture course to be given during the World's Congress of the Deaf is being manifested to a greater degree than those in charge looked for. Eighty tickets were engaged before the dates were set, and Mr. Long, of the Wisconsin School corps, has just sent in a draft for $5 worth of tickets. These lectures will be worth consideration amid the multitudinous attractions proposed for the deaf, the first being by the distinguished son of the founder of the deaf schools in the United States and one of the acknowledged authorities in matters pertaining to the deaf, and the other by one of the most finished products of the sign-language, Prof. W. G. Jones, of the New York Institution.

Funny it is, but nevertheless the children of the deaf are not without musical inclinations. J. G. Gallaher's three-year-old Fay executes "Tarra-ra boom de-ray" to the clap of hands, and George Dougherty's two-and-one-half-years-old girl can trip the steps in time to music. Mrs. Hunter's little Ethel gives a promise of becoming a graceful dancer. I wonder whence this comes. None of the mothers, so far as I know, ever belonged in the stage in the role of either a coryphee or a soubrette, and the way the fathers execute the Irish jig is enough to make Abe Frantz's Kendall Green mule tired.

I made a brief call around the World's Fair grounds, recently, and I fear that the exhibition will be in a greatly incomplete condition by May 1st, the date set for its formal opening. All the main buildings are ready, but their contents must be coming on the slowest freight trains, as not one-third of the exhibits have arrived and been installed. However, that need not concern the deaf. The fair will be in complete running order by the 1st of July, and the deaf will mostly be here two weeks later, in plenitude of time to see all in their entirety.

Mr. Regensburg desires me to say that Miss McCowan, of 6550 Yale Street, Englewood, will take engagements for her rooms if ordered before the 1st of May, at 75 cents and $1 a night, and cots at 50 cents. Landlords Watters and Schwartz, of Schwartz's Hotel, 100 North Clark Street, will give special attention to those deaf who order rooms a week in advance. This hotel is located within eight blocks of the Club quarters, and the rates will be 75 cents a day for single rooms and $1 each person for double rooms.

The program for the World's Fair Congress was mailed broadcast Wednesday night. It is an exhaustive synopsis of the subjects to be treated, well gotten up, and reflects great credit upon the gentlemen who have given their time and talents toward its preparation. If carried out verbatim and in the spirit intended and desired by the committee, the World's Fair Congress of the Deaf will make a memorable epoch in the history of their class.

A newly-married North Side lady was seen remarking to a feminine caller: "The paragraphist's idea that men are always impatient over their wives' tardiness in getting ready for the street, must be an erroneous one. Why, the other afternoon I spent a whole hour curling my bangs and pulling on my new gloves, and when I came down, Jacob was quietly pulling away at his briar as if we had plenty of time for the appointment." "Where were you going?" "To church." "Oh?" (expressively)

The Rev. Mr. Mann writes that all his previous appointments for Chicago and other western places are cancelled on account of his physical inability to fill them. His next service in Chicago is booked for May 28th. April 30th, the Rev. Mr. Cloud will hold services at St. Clement's, and it is probable that the newly-recovered six-year-old son of Mrs. Rachel Sherard may be baptized on this occasion.

E. S. Johnson, of Rockford, Ill., is reported in the Chicago papers as having gone crazy and assaulted his neighbors in a violent manner. He was arrested and placed in close confinement.

Joe Dolan, late of Michigan, and a former pupil of the Buffalo Catholic School, was in town the first part of the week, meeting old-time acquaintances. Mr. Dolan may locate here.

Mr. Hasenstab officiated at the Methodist Church to one of the largest assemblages in a most instructive manner. Prof. Woods is to conduct the services next Sunday.

Joe Drinkwine, formerly of Auburn Park, Ill., has gone to Racine, Wis., where he has secured employment at his trade—that of a painter.

BOHEME.

The Telautograph.

The deaf will probably find in Gray's latest patent, the telautograph, the friend for which they have long been waiting. They can, by its aid, talk with people at a distance over a telegraph wire as well as other folks can. The instrument receives the written message and delivers it at the other end of the wire in kind. The whole process is, in fact, carrying a letter by telegraph.

It is not necessary to run to the instrument every time a message is coming. It may be left on a desk or on a table near by, and glanced at occasionally. Anything coming in will be written on the roll of paper, and whether there are two messages or a hundred, they will all be there when the instrument is consulted. So, too, a person could go away for a spell, and when he returned everything sent him during his absence would be recorded by the machine to await his return.

The telautograph is equally as good for an orally-instructed person, provided he can read and write the current language of his vicinity, as for a deaf-mute pure and simple. With hearing persons it will find rapid favor, and on account of its reliability and convenience will be preferred to the telephone.

Deaf persons will be enabled to do more and better work in offices and elsewhere because of this instrument. They may even have it in their own homes, if their business and purse warrant it.

It would be a pleasure to announce that the telautograph was an invention of Dr. Bell; but it is a product of his great rival, Dr. Gray, and we do not think there will be any dispute over the patent.—N. Y. Register.

The Philadelphia Institution.

Our new industrial building is rapidly approaching completion, and there is every reason to hope that in a week or two it will be ready for occupancy. The opening of this building will be an event of no little importance in our history. A large portion of the cost of erecting it was assumed by a member of our Board of Directors, and this generous act is an assurance that the value of industrial training for our children is keenly appreciated by our board of managers, and that it will be carried up to the highest possible degree of efficiency. Our classes in the various industrial branches will have in the new building facilities which they never possessed before, and the results of industrial training in the future will, as a consequence, surpass anything in the past. The future before the industrial department is of the rosiest kind.—Silent World.

Do They Pray for Us?

Some time ago, a deaf-mute asked a friend with whom he was conversing, "Do people talk about us?" The friend replied that sometimes they did, but not often. Then he asked, "Do the persons pray for us?" He was told that they prayer for the world and mankind generally. "My cousin tells me," the deaf man said, "that they prayed for soldiers, sailors, the heathen, and rulers or governors, but she never heard them pray for the deaf." His friend said they were included in, "all sorts and conditions of men," but at the same time admitted that there was some point in the deaf man's remarks worthy of the heed of Christian teachers.

COLLEGE CHRONICLE.

A Chapter on the "Buff and Blue."

CAMPING OUT AT GREAT FALLS.

Yarns and Incidents Pertaining Thereto.

From our College Correspondent.

The fifth issue of the Buff and Blue came out at the close of the week. In addition to the editorials, well-written as usual, the number contains a poem, "Faith," by Miss Daly, '97; an essay, "The Material versus the Intellectual," by Smith, '83; "Flowers," by Shucy, '90; a sketch, "The Blue House," translated from the French of Emanuel Arene by Miss Tiegel, '93, and "Nature's Gift to the Deaf," by Divine, '94. The Local, Alumni, Exchange and Athletic departments are excellent as usual. The "Directory of Graduates and Former Students" is continued. Advertisements are numerous. Three articles in the issue are unusually good. Miss Daly's poem is highly creditable in every way; Miss Tiegel's sketch is well-translated and the quaint humor of the story itself makes it doubly interesting, the editor of the Companion makes a most vigorous and forcible argument in favor of greater intellectual education and training, and pleads strongly against the materialistic tendency of the age. This especially is of more than ordinary importance, and is well worth careful reading.

The Buff and Blue is emphatically a success, and there seems to be no reason why its present prosperity should not last indefinitely. It compares favorably with any similar publication and is far better than a great many. Pecuniarily it is doing very well. Advertisements are beginning to come in unsolicited, and the abundant funds now on hand will justify the board in paying for all labor expended upon it during the coming year. Typographically it is a beauty.

Those who had decided to camp out during vacation left, Wednesday afternoon, for the old stamping ground, Camp Gallaudet, at the Great Falls of the Potomac, eighteen miles west of Washington. Nearly every one went, less than a score remaining at the Green. Nothing whatever happened here while they were gone, everything being dull in the extreme. Those who remained were at their wits' end to kill time. Some played cards, some indulged in the frivolous occupation of reading novels, and some went to the theatres. De Wolf Hopper's comic opera "Wang" ended its season here and large crowds packed the National nightly. "The Yankee League" presented by the Mask and Wig Club of the University of Pennsylvania, was at the Academy Saturday night and also drew enormous crowds. By means of these and similar amusements the stay-at-homes managed to make the time pass. The weather has been wretchedly bad, raining almost every day, while the nights have been quite cold. A number of stragglers and deserters from the camp strayed in during the week, bringing with them reports of an exceedingly diverse nature as to how things were progressing at the aforesaid rendezvous. Some averred that the weather had been abominable, and that the campers had done nothing but sit in their tents, wet and shivering, and bemoan their hard luck, while others, on the contrary, claimed that they had had a most enjoyable time; the fish being so numerous and eager to be caught that they actually waded out of the water and climbed up the bank; the farmers had supplied them with every delicacy they could desire, and that the weather had been extremely delightful. So contending and so diametrically opposed to each other were these reports that no one knew what to believe, and the arrival of the boys was expectantly awaited. Monday, at noon, two big wagons loaded with a miscellaneous assortment of campapharnalia rolled into the Green, bringing with them a score or more red-faced, rough-looking fellows whom Gate-keeper Lucas at first thought were tramps. Closer inspection, however, showed familiar faces, and soon all were being closely questioned as to how they had enjoyed themselves. A summary of their reports would seem to indicate that the boys had an unusually good time—probably the best outing during the past four or five years. The weather was just warm enough, it rained only once (and very slightly at that), and every thing seemed to combine to render their stay as agreeable as possible. Grub was plentiful, and although the cooking was rather crude, every one getting more than his allotted peck of dirt, the change from the college cuisine was thoroughly appreciated. A number went swimming and all had a royally good time.

An unusually large number of visitors were present daily, and several parties from the city went out. Dr. Gallaudet drove out Saturday to see how his boys were getting along; McIlvaine, '93, and Howard, '95, accompanied by Misses Fish, Daly, Mickle and Price, went out Friday; a big mountain-wagon took all the young ladies of the college out on Saturday, by invitation of Stafford, '93, and W. E. Hoy, of baseball fame, went out the same day also. Stafford was, unfortunately, prevented from going out himself, being disabled by a fall from his 'cycle. Messrs. Le Fever and Moylan were out, too.

The campers had an endless number of amusing stories to relate concerning their adventures. A soph decided to take a walk one evening near midnight. He had not gone far before he tumbled over the bank and pitched head-first into the canal. It was so dark that no one could see him, as he floundered about and it is possible he might have given up the ghost then and there had it not been for the fact that his hat had fallen off, the blinding glare from his head dispelled the cimmerian gloom, and he was pulled to shore with a boat-hook. A great many other "yarns" were told, but this is sufficient.

The presentation of the "Yankee League" at the Academy, Saturday night, by the Mask and Wig Club of the University of Pennsylvania, was indubitable evidence that a College Dramatic Club can give a performance far superior to that of the average professional troupe when its resources are sufficiently ample. Would that the Saturday Night Club might achieve a like success.

The new board to manage the Buff and Blue will be chosen Wednesday. It will probably be as announced in last week's chronicle.

F. J. B.

KENDALL GREEN, Apr. 15, '93.

To Tear Down St. Ann's Church.

ITS SITE ON WEST EIGHTEENTH STREET WILL BE PUT TO COMMERCIAL USE.

St. Ann's Protestant Episcopal Church for Deaf-Mutes in West Eighteenth Street, near Fifth Avenue, after having occupied its present home for thirty-four years, will probably be torn down and its site used for commercial purposes. Although the transaction has not yet been consummated, the church received an offer last week of $160,000 for its property. This proposition was made by a well-known firm of manufacturers whose names will not be made public unless negotiations are completed.

For some time past there has been a desire expressed by certain influential members of St. Ann's congregation to remove the church up town. This idea, however, does not meet with the general view of the majority. But owing to changed surroundings and the constantlyincreasing scope of St. Ann's Deaf-Mute Mission, it is felt that if another and larger site could be advantageously secured the work inaugurated by the Rev. Thomas Gallaudet, D.D., the rector-emeritys of St. Ann's, would receive still further impetus.

Dr. Gallaudet said yesterday: "I have no doubt that before long we shall have to move, as we are gradually being crowed out; but where we should go to I cannot say. I do not think up town though. I think if we could get $200,000 for the property there would be no hesitancy about accepting."

St. Ann's is said to be the first church in Christendom to undertake a special mission for deaf-mutes. In September, 1850, Dr. Gallaudet commenced a Bible Class for deaf-mutes in the vestry room of old St. Stephen's Church at Broome and Chrystie Streets. It grew so rapidly he was compelled to remove to 59 Bond Street, where the class remained several years. Early in 1852 various circumstances led Dr. Gallaudet to think that there should be one church in the city having a special mission to deaf-mutes. The small chapel of the New York University on Washington Square, was engaged, the rent of $300 having been provided by the Vestry of Trinity Church, and on the first Sunday of October, 1852, parish life began. Dr. Gallaudet was elected rector.

The present property was purchased in July, 1859, for $70,000. Dr. Gallaudet resigned the active rectorship of the church last October in favor of the Rev. E. H. Krans, who became associate rector in 1874. As rector emeritus, however, Dr. Gallaudet watches over the affairs of St. Ann's as energetically as he does those of the Gallaudet Home for Deaf-Mutes, of which he is the founder and general manager.

St. Ann's church property consists of four lots in addition to the buildings. There is a frontage of 100 feet on West Eighteenth Street, and the entire site covers an area of half a block betweenth Eighteenth and Nineteenth Streets.—N. Y. Times.

Mr. W. E. Hoy has at last come to terms, and has signed with Washington League Club for this season.

Mr. E. A. Baldree, a deaf-mute, of Greenville, N. C., moved to Veni, N. C., last week to live with Mr. J. W. Carlisle.

The Brooklyn Deaf-Mute Society will have a social reception with refreshments on its closing meeting for the vacation.

Mr. E. A. Hodgson will deliver a lecture before the Brooklyn Deaf-Mute Society. His subject will be made known in due time.

Mrs. George Homer, of Arlington, Mass. is the proud possessor of a second grandson. The young mother and child are doing nicely.

The deaf-mute centre fielder Stephenson, who played with the Phillies for a time last season, is claimed both by Harrisburg and Muskegon.—The Sporting Life, April 8.

NEW YORK.

The Ladies' Annual Fair for the Gallaudet Home.

CLASSICAL EVENING BY THE IDA MONTGOMERY CIRCLE.

A Very Pleasant Entertainment—The Xavier Club "Gala Week."

(From our New York Correspondent.)

Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, April 11th, 12th and 13th, inaugurated and terminated the annual Ladies' Fair in aid of the Gallaudet Home for Deaf-Mutes.

To have happened in any other place than the Guild Room of St. Ann's Church, would have increased the expenses, and consequently decreased the receipts.

This the committee of ladies, having the arrangements in charge decided contrary to wise business procedure, and where a woman will, she will, and that's the end on't.

Miss Gussie Berley, Mrs. I. N. Soper, Mrs. Alice M. Yaukauer and Mrs. J. Stratton constituted the committee. Their plans were well laid, and they have every reason to feel proud of the returns, which sum up as follows:

Tuesday	$72 40
Wednesday	99 91
Thursday	136 21
Donations	104 00
Total	$413 52

To this remains to be added at least $85 from ten cent contributions.

The weather was by no means "fair." For all that the attendance was marked, as usual the final hours of the thirty-six bringing out the deaf mute contingent. Each of the tables was pretty well cleaned out before the end. There were seven of them, with the fruits of the sewing circle displayed on the centre one "The Home Table," presided over by Mrs. Alice M. Yankauer and Miss Sarah Stein.

At the Lexington Avenue School Table, Miss Agnes L. Perry was overseer, and commanded good return for her stock in trade, consisting of toilet articles, bric-a-brac, and ornaments meant to be inviting for a couple of artistic tastes.

During Wednesday and Thursday Miss Maggie Jones was almost hid from view behind a pile of roses that came down from the rich gardens of Henry J. Haight's Goshen homestead. Her deft fingers pinned on many a flower to a coat lapel, she charged nothing for that, but for the roses, Whew! how the price of silver circulated. Her patrons that felt dry after inhaling the fragrance of Mr. Haight's roses, had lemonade to soothe their thirst, and they paid for it, too.

This year the Brooklyn Table moved to the west side of the room, with Miss Evangeline Kelly in charge. Her hold on the fair visitors was due to the fact she was nearest to the entrance, and the receipts of her sales added a good sum to the grand total.

The check room, where hats and wraps were stored, was conducted on the free trade plan. A mild looking protectionist was around the corner. She was Miss Carrie Harth. Her counter was full on the first day. During the evening of the third, there were more boxes than anything else. The reason for this was she sold candy, and every body at the fair ate candy. It is said Miss Harth will have a dentist's annex on the occasion of the next annual.

To the front of the candy booth, Miss Annie L. Waidler was occupied dispensing with a mind-racking variety of articles, whose origin and manufacture emanated with Miss Prudence Lewis, of the New York Institute, and several of the pupils and friends of Miss Lewis. Miss Hasty was Miss Annie L. Waidler's assistant here. They captured a bright array of dimes and dollars.

The corner in groceries was well looked after by Mrs. Franklin Campbell, whose big white apron and motherly face attracted the well-to-do and wise portion of the fair visitors.

Mrs. J. W. Stratton dispensed with excellent coffee, appetizing sandwiches, and for the young couples had ready a large stock of ice-cream.

There were numerous "chance competitors" as well as donation lists. An oak desk attracted many envious glances from the literary contingent. Robert Harth held the chance book; ten cents being the limit. It was captured by Mr. W. O. Fitzgerald, who presented it to the Home. Mrs. W. O. Fitzgerald donated the oak card table that was presented Dr. Gallaudet.

Several pictures, appropriately framed, were likewise disposed of. Mrs. John Chamberlain was voted a finely executed painting of "cherubs."

Miss Gussie Berley acknowledged the compliments conferred on her for the able management of the Fair, with a suffusion of blushes, and with the modest assertion, it was not due to her but to some one else.

Miss Daisy Hollister was an interested visitor, Thursday evening. Of the others, besides the members of the different clubs, may be mentioned Mrs. Hatch, Dr. and Mrs. Gallaudet, Rev. and Mrs. Chamberlain, and the Misses Chamberlain, Miss Lou Schreiber, Mr. and Mrs. Willard P. Smith, Mrs. Henry Schanck, Mrs. E. Souweine and Miss Elnora Rose, Mrs. Chas. Bryan, Mrs. Adolph Ekardt, Mrs. Henry Kircher, the Misses Mary and Nellie Long, Miss Myra Barrager, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rose, young ladies of the Ida Montgomery Circle, members of the Protean Society, Miss K. Blauvelt, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Tobin, Mr. Senior and Mrs. Henry Juhring, Mrs. Frank Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. J. Laing, T. Winifred Brown and Uncle Jim O'Neil.

THE GALLAUDET HOME FOR DEAF MUTES, POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

A CLASSICAL EVE.

The poetic, the statuesque, the dramatic and the pantomimic lovers fairly bubbled over with joy and delight on Saturday evening.

Gents with immaculate shirt fronts led the way from the entrance to sites of advantage. Ah me! poor ushers.

Other gentlemen with clean shaven faces, having long coats, that seemed to hang on from the shoulders, tried to look for all the world like Booth or McCullough.

Young ladies with a "don't care" arrangement of the hair, and wearing hats of a size tormenting to back seaters, brought to mind visions of Mrs. James Brown Potter, Miss Mary Anderson, Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, Ada Rehan, and other well known devotees of the stage.

It was before the rise of the curtain in the Y. M. C. A. theatre on West 125th Street. The snug little theatre of the Christians was well occupied by that time. They called it a "Classical Evening," under the auspices of the Ida Montgomery Circle of the New York Institution for the Instruction of the Deaf, with Mrs. Wm. Rose, Miss M. A. Hasty, Miss J. H. Buss, Miss A. L. Waidler and Miss M. A. Boyd as the committee of arrangements.

The programme opened with two scenes in the history of "Hiawatha's Wooing," representing "First visit to the arrow maker" (Miss Mary A. Martin), and (2) "Hiawatha's (Miss Johanna Buss) coming to woo and win Minnehaha" (Miss Ella F. Taylor). All of which was picturesque and captivating in its presentation, and called for genuine applause.

When the curtain arose again the statuel-ike figures of Messrs. A. Baxter, F. Avens, and M. Glynn assumed twenty-two different poses, adapted from the Iliad of Homer, from designs by John Flakeman' R. A., and others.

Each of the titles were succeeded by a poetic explanation on the programme, which were interpreted orally by Mr. Enoch H. Currier during the presentations.

Some of the poses had been seen, but were still interesting and showed painstaking efforts.

Following came the Court Scene from "the Merchant of Venice.

Miss Boyd's recital was splendid. Her apparent coolness and marked retention of the passages she had to commit to memory was generally commented upon.

As the Duke, Mr. Van Tassel seemto be weighted down with his crown, but on the throne looked the personification of dignity and royal blood. Mr. Mann as Antonio did his speaking part well, but fell short of the supposed height of that brave nobleman by possibly a foot and a half. Messrs. Bowers and Avens divided honors, with a possible little more vigorousness in the speech of the latter.

Miss Martin looked solemn and pleased as the occasion justified.

As to Mr. Jones' Shylock, it was all very nice as far as the recital. In make-up Shylock was there too. However, compared with a stage production of the play, Mr. Jones held back, or possibly seemed afraid of giving the character its real gusto in pantomimic delineation.

Prof. Currier interpreted the recital orally, the different characters using the every-day sign-language. No. 4 of the Programme, was an interpretation in signs of Hamlet's Soliloquy on Death, by Miss Ella Taylor, and the final number was Wm. Gladstone Jones' rendition of the "Parson and the monkey."

Mrs. W. H. Rose is entitled to a large share of the credit for the evening's successful entertainmetn, and the proceeds are reported to have netted a handsome sum.

Monday last inaugurated the Xavier Club's "Gala Week." From top to bottom the club house will be open to visitors each evening during the dates April 17th to 22d inclusive.

To add to the interest of the entertainment, the different departments will conduct a fair on a small scale. Tables have been assigned to the athletic club, the debating club, and the deaf-mute branch. At the latter a bevy of deaf-mute ladies are in charge, and indications point to large returns from their stock in trade. The deaf-mutes have also fixed up a fish pond, which is one of the features of the entertainment. Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings will doubtless see a large attendance of deaf-mutes. Besides the attractive display at the different tables, musical and gymnastic entertainment will occur on each evening. That alone is worth the small price of admission, 25 cents.

MONTAGUE TIGG.

THE TALE BEARER.

If there is a human being utterly base, a creature in whose breast there is no spark of honour, that despicable specimen of humanity must surely be the telltale. There is not one redeeming point in his character. He has not virtue enough to be good, and lacks the courage to be openly wicked. He is worse than a thief, because there is honor even among thieves. But the tale-bearer knows no honor. He strikes behind the back; he is an assassin of character, a human stiletto. Having no character of his own, he seeks by standing on the ruins of the reputation of others to raise himself to the common level. He delights to betray confidence, to make strife between friends, and to arouse suspicion and distrust between superior and subordinates. He is indeed a veritable pest in any community.

The tattler spreads only evil reports. He never tells of good action. To justice, kindness and charity, he is alike a stranger. In his manner he is very important and confidential. He would make you believe that he does not wish to publish what he is telling you as a secret. In other words he wants to bring an accusation in such form that the party accused will never know whence the injury comes nor have any opportunity of defending himself or proving his innocence.

The Puritans of New England treated the slanderer with the scorn he deserved; but the split stick, in which the lying tongue was pinched, and the ducking-stool have long been abolished. Still if the tale-bearer cannot be publicly shamed, he can be privately silenced. He will not stand cross-examination. Press him for facts and evidence, and he beats a double shuffle. He will not face the man he would injure. It is rumor, surmise, hearsay; and thus he tries to shift the reponsibility from his own shoulders.

Remember, however, that he who is the first to tell tales to you will be the very first to tell tales of you. Treat the tale-bearer with the contempt which the miserable wretch deserves, and he will die a natural and speedy death from lack of that appreciation which to him is nourishment.—Ex.

A cable dispatch in the New York Sun, dated Bainford, Ala., April 11th, says that P. G. Moore, a deaf-mute, is to start from Fort Payne, May 1st, and tramp it to Chicago. The headline bears the following: "On the Railroad, of Course."

"Rienzi, the Last of the Tribunes" is the subject of an interesting lecture, which Mr. Wm. G. Jones will deliver next Saturday evening, the 22d inst., at the hall of Brooklyn Deaf-Mute Society. The deaf will have an assurance of a good "treat." Brooklynites, arouse and come one and all. See the advertisement on the fourth page.

ST. LOUIS.

A Lecture On Hawaii.

THE DEAF REJOICE OVER THE NEW MAYOR.

A Calico Party.

From our St. Louis Correspondent.

The principal attraction at the club last week was the interesting lecture, handed down by Mrs. J. H. Cloud, who for about an hour, spoke on the Hawaii Islands. Their discovery by Capt. Cook, subsequent growth and development, the peculiarities of the people and the manner in which they live, formed a part of her lecture, but the reporter was not present to give a retrospective summary of some of her arguments about its prospective annexation to the United States. The short lecture, however, did much towards the enhancement of the pleasure for that evening, and social intercourse wound up the time left at leisure. The next on the card is Frank Read, whose dramatic signs will not fail to feed mirth for all those who come on April 22d.

Since the new lecture committee was appointed, it has been their policy to remunerate lecturers a good sum for their services, no matter if they live outside of the city or not. Usually half of the door receipts is given to residents, and those who coming from other cities are paid for their travelling expenses, besides for their services.

We have at last got there. Our generous friend, Col. Cyprus P. Wallbridge was elected Mayor of this city out in the breezy West last Tuesday, and took the reins of our municipal government Saturday morning. Our brave men, regardless of party faith, are still rejoicing over his triumphant victory, and a good many are said to have been bothered with some costly beverages by those who took the opposite side of the view on his winning. Mr. Merrell was kept busy this week in handshaking on his brother-in-law's fortunate acquisition in the highest gift of the city. Walbridge's interests and enthusiasm in deaf-mutes has no bounds, but having much business to attend, he could hardly spare the time to go to our entertainments where Merrell's other folks are wont to go. At the party tendered by the Merrells to Miss Annie B. Halley (now Mrs. Henry Gross) nearly five years ago, he took an active part in the fun and enjoyed it to his heart's content. His life bespeaks much allegiance to that of Lincoln, Garfield and others, for when he was a mere boy, he sawed wood to make money for his entrance into the University of Michigan, where he graduated from the law department. He then sought his fortune in St. Louis, and got a job as collector in Merrell's father's drug store. As a noble statesman he arose rapidly in local distinction, was accorded seats in both houses of the Municipal Assembly, and once President of the Council. He is still President of the Merrell Drug Co., and devotes about half a day to that office, and the other half to his executive duties.

The club did a great financial business at its meeting, Thursday night. With fair unanimity, the members voted to appropriate $22 to purchase a stereopticon for the club's exhibition purposes. The lantern will be given a trial before the shekels are turned over. The club consented to let three members borrow $95 from its exechequer, with interest at six per cent. Its financial standing is still in a very sound condition.

A neat $40 turned the head of the verdant youth of thas old town, Kansas City! We are glad their ball was a success, and are not ashamed to tell it. We are not trying to disguise the fact that we tapped the German beverage at our ball, but it was much less in profit and quantity than the figure placed out of "Prince's" pure imaginative brain. There was none from Kansas City at our ball who could furnish him with the above evidence,—it is all bosh. He tries to emphasize on his readers that "honesty, being the best policy," has some reference to selling beer. It is not so. We had beer in a separate room and sold it to any one who takes a glass and knows what is in it and what it is good for. It is all there is to it. His views on our ball are not near so astonishing as this entertaining only two young ladies, Misses Fritz and Kelly, as the sole belles of their ball. That he has grossly misrepresented our club, has caused a good deal of resentment among us, which has reflected much discredit on the veracity of the Kansas City Deaf-Mute Club.

Last night, twenty-two couples bowed acknowledgment to Mrs. Froning and her assistants for the inexpensive fun they volunteered to give them at the calico party, and taken as a whole was a brilliant affair. The ladies had aprons of different colors on. A small strip made of it was enclosed in an envelope and thrown in a box. It was about 9:30, when the sterner sex began to fall in line, one by one picked up an envelope, and was allotted to the lady having the same color as the necktie. The ladies had to adjust the ties themselves, and it was a difficult task for those who did not know how to place them. The pairs made by the assignation was as follows: Mr. Hill and Miss F. Schum; H. Fritz and Mrs. Dieckmann; C. Wolff and Miss Kauffmann; W. Theurer and Mrs. Kerr; E. Kingon and Mrs. Froning; L. Froning and Mrs. Kingon; M. Kerr and Miss A. McCamley; Dr. Guss and Miss Sallie Froning; L. Perlumuetter and Miss Hines, Wm. Campbell and Miss McHose; H. L. Johnson and Miss Pearce; J. May and Miss Nissing; J. Mandeville and Miss Keru; Alfred Kingon and Miss Tunze; J. Brown and Miss Klug; L. Lohmann and Miss M. McCamley; A. Dieckmann and Miss Fey; R. Schneider and Mrs. Campbell; H. Gibbons and Miss Stella Horstmann; H. McCamley and Mrs. Johnson; N. Stafford and Miss Roberts; W. H. Schaub and Miss Nellie Lohmann. Up to twelve o'clock, the fun reigned supreme, and in justice to the committee, Mrs. Froning, Kingon and Kerr, Misses McCamley and Kern, Messrs. J. J. Brown and A. Hill, we should say their labors to make the affair a success should be well commented upon.

The life of Martin Luther, the morning star of the German reformation, was the subject of Rev. Cloud's last discourse on "Church History."

According to a report received from a pupil at Fulton that seems to be well authenticated, it appears that James Nolly Tate will cease to be superintendent of the Missouri Institution after this term. A vigorous search of the columns of the Record failed to give any color to the rumor, and they are rather reticent as to the outcome of the charges preferred against him and his investigation before the Governor.

John Kribs is now a member of the Y. M. C. A., which has also the memberships of Messrs. Cloud, Fritz and Hammer. They all joined for the sole purpose of embracing its superb gymnastic facilities.

Jack Delancy says all the fun the wealth of the Goulds, Astors, etc., can dispense with is in no way superior to club life in St. Louis, and he stole into this city last week from St. Joseph, Mo., to hunt up a job. He got one, but unfortunately hurt his finger with a shoe machine, so he returned home, but will come back in due time to get another job.

The other day Edward Dolan narrowly escaped a terrible accident, when the car he was riding in was overturned in passing a sharp curve, and several persons were hurt. The conductor requested Dolan to sign his name on a paper certifying as a witness, but he refused, and it was not long before the appearance of a blue-coat forced him to do it.

Miss Lizzie Fleighmann is gone to her home in High Hill, Mo., with Miss Schum, to attend the double wedding of her two brothers.

Some of the ladies of St. Thomas mission presented a bunch of flowers to Miss Franklin, of Philadelphia, who is undergoing treatment for her eyes somewhere in the city.

James J. Brown has subscribed for $125 worth of stock in the National Refrigerator Co., under which he is working.

Alex. Wright had the misfortune of seeing his dead father in Kansas City, who died precisely a month after his wife's demise.

Hugh P. Lamb will be delighted to show any one his new bouncing baby, which was presented to him last month.

Miss King is entertaining Miss Tunze, of Columbia, Ill., this week.

TARNES.

The Colorado Institution.

The Board of Trustees of the Institute for the Deaf and Blind yesterday appointed Dr. Gillett of Jacksonville, Ills., to be superintendent of the institution to take the place of Mr. John E. Ray.

The new superintendent comes from one of the largest and best known institutions for deaf-mutes in the United States. He is a recognized educator in his sphere of labor. He is a brother of Dr. O. T Gillett of this city.

Mr. Ray, the retiring superintendent, has been with the institution for six years. He has filled the position with energy and ability, until the school has come to be recognized as one of the best conducted of the State institutions.

In answer to a query by a representative of The Gazette, a member of the board stated that there were no special reasons for the removal of Mr. Ray, other than that the board thought that it was for the "best interests" of the institution to make the change.

Miss Evangeline Kelly, eldest daughter of Mr. B. F. Kelly, of Brooklyn, N.Y., will be one of the lovely bridesmaid of her hearing sister Blanche on Wednesday evening, at eight o'clock, April 26th, at the Tompkins Avenue Congregational Church. Miss E. Kelly has a sweet voice and is always cheerful in spirit. She is a very popular young lady, and is loved and admired by every body.

An exchange says that deafness in Persia is treated in the following radical manner: With an immense syringe, two drops of the bloob of a toad, or three drops of the juice of an onion, are injected into the patient's ears. If his hearing is not restored after this original treatment, his case is given up as hopeless. And if the patient does not gain his hearing as a result of the treatment, he is allowed to grow up in total ignorance. That is the difference between a country that is civilized and Christianized and one that is not.—Silent Hoosier.

Mr. Reuben C. Stephenson, of Trenton, N. J., who is playing for Camden Baseball Club, in Camden, N. J., was seen at All Souls' Church last Sunday, and yesterday afternoon. He says, he was invited to play for Harrisburg would not go there, for he fears he would be compelled to play on Sundays, to which he strongly objects.

The members of Mutual Baseball Club, seem to be very much interested in the Bible lessons, by their collective presence in the Bible classroom every Sunday.

Messrs. Connolly and Murphy, coming from Boston, Mass., are in the employment of Quaker City Laundry, on Locust Street near 4th Street, where Mrs. James Oakes labors.

THE RECORDER.

PHILA., April 17, 1893.

Woodwork in Art.

I see it stated that Herr Natter, the distinguished Austrian sculptor, was in his youth a woodcarver, and by the practice of his humble craft rose to eminence in the highest of the plastic arts. Now, not a few of the best known artists of this country have served a similar apprenticeship. Sir Francis Chantrey, who died worth $100,000, rose from the carving of ships' figureheads, through second class portrait painting, to quarry in the gold mine of his very respectable if not transcendant talents. It is only another illustration of the truth that to the real artist the medium is nothing—nothing but a means to reach a higher end.—London Graphic.

NEW YORK, April 17, 1893.

One of the best city conveniences is a store where you can get everything that men and boys wear, and your money back if you want it. Our three stores—at your service—are of this kind.

Spring overcoats this year are a trifle more picturesque than heretofore—not so many smooth ones and more silk lining and silk facing.

We keep right up with the times, and those worsted overcoats with silk inside are luxurious indeed. But of course we don't go back on the good old meltons and kerseys.

A. L. Thomas, a deaf-mute salesman, will be glad to show you our stock at the Prince Street store when you can conveniently call to look at clothing, hats or shoes.

Free deliveries to all points within one hundred miles of New York City, excepting C. O. D. packages.
